INTERROGATORY NO. 9

Describe and explain the following:

- a. How many Legacy Accounts in the United States existed when You first started collecting age, date of birth, or other indicia of age during Account creation.
- b. When, if at all, You began collecting age, date of birth, or other indicia of age for Legacy Accounts.

CONFIDENTIAL — PROTECTED BY CONFIDENTIALITY AGREEMENT

c. How You prompted Legacy Account Users to disclose their age, date of birth, or other indicia of age.

d. Why You started collecting age, date of birth, or other indicia of age Concerning Legacy Accounts.

e. Your policy (including, but not limited to, data collection and data retention policies) if a Legacy Account's Account Setup indicated a user was under 13 years old when they originally created the account.

f. If and when You completed Your collection of age, date of birth, or other indicia of age for Legacy Accounts.

RESPONSE TO INTERROGATORY NO. 9

In December 2019, Meta began requiring all individuals creating an Instagram account to provide their date of birth as part of the account registration process. Meta is unable to determine the number of Legacy Users who did not have a date of birth associated with their account at the time this process rolled out in December 2019. However, according to the earliest available data, as of May 2021, there were approximately 70 million users in the United States who did not have a date of birth associated with their Instagram Account.

Instagram rolled out a mandatory age collection flow to existing Instagram users who did not have an age associated with their account ("US Legacy Accounts") between May 2, 2022 and June 10, 2022.¹ This meant that when an existing user with no birthday on their account accessed their Instagram account, they were presented with the "add your own birthday" blocking screen shown below (Figure 1) and could not move past that screen without entering their birthday.²

² For a period of a few weeks after the launch of the mandatory age collection flow, the add birthday checkpoint screen language had to be shortened because the text was not all appearing on smaller device screens. The full language started being shown again on June 2, 2022 after the team added scrolling capability.
