>Short stories dumbed down for beginners that is

[REDACTED] (4/28/2021 15:17:21 PDT):
>BY the way I think the teen privacy stuff will have a much lower impact now that we are only talking about U16 and stated age. For example - only 11% of Existing US teen accounts have a stated age U16 - and of those 38% are already private. So only 60%*11% = 6.5% of US teens will even see the upsell - let alone go through with it

[REDACTED] (4/28/2021 15:17:56 PDT):
>The numbers look worse for new users but not catastrophic. Impact should also be less than last time due to some of the mitigations shipped by the graph team (Discussed it with [REDACTED] this morning).

>However, we will definitely have to keep an eye on the wellbeing guys!! In the product team meeting yesterday [REDACTED] said - "leadership is willing to take a 4% hit on teen ecosystem metrics for these default changes. Since we will now probably go under that that leaves us with a few % of impact budget to use up with the other changes like comment privacy"

[REDACTED] (4/28/2021 15:20:10 PDT):
>Seems like the wrong way to think about it to me :(

Darius Kilstein (4/28/2021 16:05:49 PDT):
>lol yes definitely the wrong way to think about it

Darius Kilstein (4/28/2021 16:05:54 PDT):
>oops sorry @silent

Darius Kilstein (4/28/2021 16:06:25 PDT):
>thanks for keeping an eye on them. lets make sure there is clear upside in terms of privacy wins for the things they suggest to offset any potential losses @silent

[REDACTED] (4/28/2021 16:10:37 PDT):
>Yeah I mean - the thing about being a manager is making sure your team has lots of work to do right :) I guess they have ended up in a spot where their work doesn't seem to impact well being or safety metrics anymore but they still need to justify keeping a bunch of eng busy

Darius Kilstein (4/28/2021 16:11:13 PDT):
>hahaha na

Darius Kilstein (4/28/2021 16:11:15 PDT):
>I just think its like

>Policy wants us to do something to have a win

Darius Kilstein (4/28/2021 16:11:29 PDT):
>so they're scrambling to figure out what
